

More than Equipment... It's a Philosophy

Reese Thompson is the Director of Facilities and Operations for the Santa Maria School District in California and he has become a devoted believer in the No-Touch Cleaning® system developed by Kaivac.

'There are other spay-and-vac/squeegee systems out there,' he says. 'But they're just equipment. With Kaivac, it's much more. It's a philosophy, [it's] a way of cleaning to protect human health.'

Thompson says the first indication that the Kaivac system is more than just another piece of equipment is that it comes with training videos.

'No other system has training videos right with the machine,' he says. 'This tells me they really want the custodian to know how to use the machine and use it properly.'

Thompson adds that even with budget cuts, he believes his schools are cleaner and healthier now than they were years ago. 'Without question, much of this is because of the Kaivac system.'
