CHICAGO — A recent Tornado Industries e-Poll finds that while some building service contractors (BSCs) — as well as carpet and window cleaning professionals — have raised their bid and service price charges in the past three years, many have made few, if any changes, according to a press release.

The release stated that the approximately 1,000 BSCs were sent e-mail invitations requesting their participation in the online survey, resulting in more than 150 responses.

When asked how their current bid proposals compare to those submitted three years ago, almost 40 percent of respondents said they are "about the same," while 21 percent said they are "less than 10 percent higher," the release noted.

Among the other findings, the survey concluded that 43 percent of BSCs have not raised the amount they charge current customers in the past three years, while another 43 percent believed most customers select the janitorial contractor with the lowest bid "most of the time."
